Mr. Baker Came Back.
Opera for 40,000,000.
She'll Tell About Us.
Same Worm Twice.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

POOR, SAD WALL STREET
sat up yesterday, took no notice, and felt very much better. George F. Baker left the warm South and came back to the Street "to take a hand."

Mr. Baker is eighty years old, but years do not count when the mind and will are young—especially, if you have more than one million to prop up each of the eighty years.

SOME SAID a big fight was on in Wall Street, and that the little lamb got their wool rubbed off between the upper and lower millstones in a grinding financial battle.

THIS MEANS that you can't borrow gambling money on certain stocks, and they won't like the "run" in a new market. The run, you know, is one more place than there are spits in the mother's milk department, so it eats after the others, not at all.

IT SEEMS THAT the worm is over. And, anyhow, the terror of speculators, helping each other to ruin the market, is absurd.

THE old-fashioned panic, when you could not borrow on government bonds, and stocks might go anywhere, will never come again. The Federal Reserve prevents that.

BUT DON'T gamble, destruction lies in that direction. Many poor lambs know it now that did not know it a month ago. And don't buy European bonds, above all. That warning has been printed here twenty times. Continued on Page 22, Column 5

IT'S A WISE PERSON WHO CAN SIDESTEP THE PITFALLS OF 'ALL FOOLS' DAY

This is April 1, "All Fools' Day," when it is legitimate to mock the unwary. The custom is so old its history is lost in antiquity. "Look before you kick," should be your slogan, for there are many pitfalls ahead.

If you obey that impulse to kick a hat there is a rude awakening for you and a laugh for the kiddies who caught you napping.

The coin you may see on the sidewalk may prove to be an unlucky place and a red hot surprise. This is one day to be cautious of your luck.

If you get a swift kick from a stranger, don't get mad. You may unconsciously have invited it.

And "beasts of the Greek" bearing gifts, especially of fruit or candy. They may prove a bitter disappointment.

GUILTY OF MANY CRIMES CHARGED

Here is the record of six articles by Gerald Chapman, arch-criminal, who sits within the gray walls of old Wethersfield Prison in Connecticut waiting for death by the hangman's rope next Tuesday. The editor of the Boston Evening American publishes them merely for the general interest they contain and because they give the first insight into Chapman's personal view of his predicament.

RESCUE ADDS TO GLORY OF SEA ROVERS

New York, April 1 (A.P.)—Adding a brilliant chapter to the long tale of thrilling rescues at sea during Winter storms, the British tanker Shirvan, under the command of Captain H. H. Roston, today with twenty-eight men from the British freighter Latham.

The Shirvan, racing to the aid of the stricken freighter in a violent gale 400 miles off Halifax, near the Chatham line, Massachusetts, which also had received from her crew the first cry for help.

The Shirvan resumed her course for New York after Captain A. H. Roston had relayed a brief dispatch of the rescue by the Shirvan.

Captain Roston, who was in command of the Shirvan when he rescued the survivors of the Titanic in 1912, reported that the Latham was nearly on beam end and all her lifeboats carried away. His messages gave no details of the rescue, except that the Latham was still afloat.

The Latham was owned by the British Steamship Company, Ltd., London, and was on her way to New York from Boston.

COAST GUARD GOES TO AID OF STEAMSHIP

North, Va., April 1 (A.P.)—The American steamer Monahan today is in distress 400 miles south of Cape Henry, according to a dispatch to the coast guard here today. The cutter Caribbean has been sent to her assistance.

PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS AUNT RECOVERING

London, April 1 (U.S.A.)—Prince Victor, eldest of the King, suffering from influenza, was slightly improved today. The Prince of Wales continues to make satisfactory progress in the recovery from the operation upon his ear.

BUY UP NEW VET HOSPITAL SITE

While the government hagles over price with the owner of the Bedford site for a new government hospital for veterans, real estate men, it was learned today, have taken options on a new site of 300 acres in another part of Bedford, intending to offer it to the Veterans Bureau for sale.

The owner of the original site in Bedford has cut his price from $100 to $250 an acre for 500 acres, but General Hines, director of the Veterans Bureau, believes the new price is still high.

BLONDE IN BLUE WINS WIFE DIVORCE

Descriptions of a "beautiful blonde in a pale blue negligee" whom they said they found in a New York hotel room with Ernest Hugh Evans, Boston automobile man, were a feature of the testimony today which won a divorce decree for Mrs. Gladys Maude Evans of Watertown in Middlesex Probate Court. The suit was uncontested.

Daniel W. Deane, a Brooklyn private detective told on the stand of finding Evans in a hotel room in New York in company with a woman whom he referred to as a "beautiful blonde." He visited the hotel on January 16 of the present year with Mrs. M. C. Evans, sister of Mrs. Evans, and another detective, he said.

The "beautiful blonde" calmly pulled on a cigarette and read a magazine, while Deane informed Evans of his mission.

Mrs. Evans testified that her married life was happy until four years ago, when her husband began to stay out at night.

Evans, though not contesting the suit, appeared in court and made arrangements for the education of their seventeen-year-old daughter, after Judge Beane granted the divorce.

FIFTEEN ESCAPES FIRE AT WINCHENDON INN

Winchendon, April 1.—Fifteen guests were forced to flee into the street when fire, caused by an overcooked boiler, raged Flynn's Inn here, John Flynn, proprietor, and his family were left homeless by the blaze, which caused damage estimated at $1,000.

Mr. Flynn vainly tried to warn guests assembled in the parlor for a half hour before the blaze was discovered. His barking, however, evoked only a scolding.

FATHER TAKES BACK MISSING CHelsea GIRL

Doris V. Anderson, sixteen-year-old daughter of Robert D. Anderson, chief pharmacist's mate at the Chelsea Naval Hospital, returned to her father's house today after she had made a hurried trip to Charleston to take her back.

According to Mrs. J. P. Bradley of Auburn street, Charleston, the girl answered at her house in company with Mrs. Bradley's daughter and told her that she was to meet her husband-to-be at the navy yard. Questioned further, she said conflicting stories in regard to her plans and gave her name as Doris. Mrs. Bradley kept the girl at her house for the night and upon reading reports of her absence notified her father.

BUSINESS GOOD, SAYS Sisson

Despite two severe downward reactions in stock prices in March and the uneasiness on that score felt throughout the country, business developments as a whole have been fairly reassuring, Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, said today at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Industrial activity is well sustained, he said; the volume of wholesale trade compares favorably with that of a year ago, commercial bank loans have increased and freight rates indicate a level of activity higher than a year ago. Mr. Sisson made an exhaustive report on industrial and financial conditions here and abroad.

GUN GIRL WHO MAY TURN ON PALS

Emma P. Benoit, 16-year-old New Bedford gangster, who confesses she was the leader of a thug gang in many a daring criminal exploit. It is expected that she will turn State's evidence and testify against her five male confederates. She says she dreamed of guns and handkerchiefs instead.

Eiks Want Coolidge

Washington, April 1 (A.P.)—An invitation was taken under consideration by the Eiks.

President Coolidge today by President Coolidge to speak in Chicago July 14, declining a moment building erected by the Eiks.

HUB SCHOONER IN TERRIFIC SEA JOUST

James R. Connolly never told a more thrilling tale of the sea than that of Captain Albert Ames after losing up his schooner Henrietta at the Fish Pier, with 42,000 pounds of fish in the pens and the ship listing badly.

All day Monday the schooner Henrietta battled with northwesterly gales while on the southeast side of Georges Bank. The storm broke early in the morning. It blew at the rate of 10 miles an hour with squalls as high as 15 miles an hour.

ALL NEAR DEATH. One powerful wave tore loose the gurry kit on the starboard side forward. With it went a small bit of the cabin lugs.

At 8:30 p. m. a most head high wave hit just forward of amidships on the port side. An immense quantity of water cascaded down the ship and she scudded until her decks were awash. Then she bore over on the starboard rail and down until her masts, very almost flush with the water, lay in the links on the port side and cabin and foredeck were buried out and across the deck under the starboard side.

It seemed an eternity before the vessel righted itself. Water poured into the cabin and forecastle two feet deep.

SMASHED TO KINKLING. Eight doors lashed together on the port side were reduced to kinkling while the eight on the starboard had been denied by five which were washed away. Of the three remaining, one had a hole of considerable size smashed in her. With them went her gear, barrels, trawl lines, hooks and knives. Her seams opened, forward, along the waterline and wherever hit her water came through.

Tuesday morning Captain Ames hauled her way up the harbor. After bounding the schooner just out for Gloucester, where she went onto a marine railway for repairs.

GERALD CHAPMAN, ARCH THUG, CONDEMNED TO DIE, AND HIS FORMER SWEETHEART

All the loot stolen in a big robbery, amounting to $20,000, is gone and Chapman is said to be almost penniless while fighting in the last ditch.

Chapman's countenance reveals slyness and a certain amount of real courage, also a great deal of naughtiness.

"Mrs. Betty Brown," Chapman's former sweetheart, was found living with him at Granary Apartments, New York, She is Betty Bates Colwell.

April 8 is the date on which he is sentenced to die at Wethersfield prison for the murder of a New Britain, Ct., policeman.

Gerald Chapman, who says he is being railroaded to the gallows, has a brilliant mind, but his mental wheels run like a 1914 auto.

KEEP MAUNDY THURSDAY IN CHURCHES

Episcopal and other Protestant churches in Greater Boston today observed Maundy Thursday with special services.

At St. Paul's Cathedral, Holy Communion was celebrated at 11 o'clock and was followed by a sermon at noon by Bishop William Lawrence. Noon services also were held at King's Chapel. The Rev. Boynton Merrill, assistant pastor of Old South Church, preached.

Trinity Church, Copley square, celebrated the institution of the sacrament of holy communion at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Anne Dunn of the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, preached at the noon service.

Five services, held at intervals through the day, marked the observance at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Bowdoin street.

Noon services were held at Keith's Boston Theatre at noon. The Rev. Edward T. Sullivan, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church of Newton Centre, spoke on Pontius Pilate. At the same hour the Rev. John B. MacCall, of Philadelphia, spoke on "The Shepherd Psalm" at Tremont Temple.

St. Ann's Episcopal Church, East Cottage, Dedham, celebrated its morning service at 7:30.

Solemn services will be held throughout the day and tomorrow at St. Paul's Cathedral.

Montana Plays April Fool on Weather

Great Falls, Mont., April 1 (A.P.)—Joining in the spirit of All Fool's Day, Great Falls prepared today to fool the weather. The weather men and all his assistants, with a straw hat parade and a general celebration of a "Winterless Winter."

Smiling skies greeted the dawn, with a chilly breeze blowing out of the north. Yesterday and last night were the coldest of the winter, and the committee on air rangements had made ready to meet any stray gust of Winter by turning the day, in an instant's notice, into a celebration of a "one-day Winter" should conditions reverse.

State officials, including Governor E. A. Tamm, were here with straw hats.

WORLD COURT'S NOTES TO U. S. OPPOSED

Geneva, April 1 (A.P.)—The nation that have signed the protocol of the permanent court of international justice have been advised by the League of Nations government of the difficulty of treating American reservations to admission to the court by direct exchange of notes and to point out the need for a general agreement.

The league has made this recommendation in a circular letter addressed to all the court signatories, inviting them to the conference to be held September 1 at Geneva to consider the American reservations.

The text of the letter emphasizes that the court signatories should take the attitude indicated in their individual replies to the note addressed them by the United States informing them of the American stand on admission to the court.

The League's circular summarizes the Secretary of State's letter to St. Louis, Mo., secretary general of the League, regarding the nature of American objections to entering the court, and calls for the court's decision to convene the September conference.

It requests all the governments addressed to inform the League secretary as soon as possible whether they accept the invitation to the conference.

HOW THURSDAY OBSERVED BY THIRINGS

By JAMES WALSH

Tremendous throngs of Catholics began their observance of Holy Thursday by attending masses in their parish churches throughout the archdiocese of Boston. Other services, including the solemn chanting of the Tenebrae tonight in the city churches, will attract many thousands.

Throughout the day hundreds of thousands of Catholics in the Boston district held their annual Holy Thursday visit to several churches to meditate and pray at the altar of repose.

Despite the heavy rain all of the day where Tenebrae services were held, were crowded to their capacity. The throng at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross was very large. Cardinal O'Connell presided.

The services began this morning at 8 o'clock. The Cardinal presided at a solemn mass. The Rev. George P. O'Connor, director of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, was the assistant priest. The Rev. Neil A. Cronin, administrator, and the Rev. William A. Dwyer, the dean and moderator, respectively, were the Rev. Robert J. Barry and the Rev. Richard J. Quinn were deacons of honor to the Cardinal.

Representing the apostles included several from St. John's Seminary, Brighton: the Rev. William B. Foley and the Rev. Richard J. Cahill of the Cathedral, the Rev. David D. Ryan, the Rev. John J. Fletcher and the Rev. P. Thomas of St. Cecilia Church, East Bay, and the Rev. Frederick Dwyer, chaplain at the Academy of Notre-Dame, Fenway.

DEATH TAKES MOTHER OF BOSTON NEWSPAPERMAN

AMERICAN GETS QUEEN'S DIARY FOR READERS

A series of absorbingly interesting human documents, written by the world's outstanding feminine figure of the nineteenth century, will be presented to Boston Evening American readers, beginning next Monday.

On that date this paper will start publication in daily installments of selections from "The Letters of Queen Victoria, 1837-1901," a human record without parallel in royal autobiographic history.

These letters by and to Queen Victoria of England, supplemented by extracts from her diary, are published with the fullest approval and approbation of His Majesty, King George V. The following noble Baron Lord Stanthorpe, private secretary to King George, was received by William Randolph Hearst, Esq., New York.

The King is very glad that through the popular newspaper press of the United States, a full presentation of Queen Victoria's character and personality, as revealed in her letters, should be made to the American people, because whom and her in lifetime, mutual feelings of sympathy and friendship were never broken.

(Signed) Stanthorpe.

The selection to be published from day to day, constitutes an unbroken revelation of this remarkable monarch who ruled the British Empire for more than sixty years. Not only do these intimate epistles reveal her character and personality, but they show her as a beautiful, womanly and mother.

As the time the letters begin, the Queen was toward the end of the weighty and glorious reign, having borne her beloved Prince Consort. She pictured her life to come as but an empty show, a mad and desolate existence.

As the years went on, however, and she was thrown on her own initiative, the Queen developed an amazing strength of character and rose to lofty spiritual heights, as shown in her letters.

BOOM IN SOUTH WILL HELP ALL NEW ENGLAND

New Haven, Conn., April 1.—The great industrial boom in the South will prove a boon to New England. It will take advantage of the need for New England goods in the South, in the opinion of Governor Nathan P. Flanders of Maine, as expressed to the local Chamber of Commerce.

Said Governor Flanders: "An increase of over $300,000,000 in the wealth of the New South in the last decade and an increase of its annual income by untold millions as a result of the recreational and industrial developments now going on in Florida and elsewhere offer a market which a New England manufacturer cannot afford to overlook."

It is not wise to spend our time in chattering at industrial development in the South, forgetting that it will take generations to develop an industrial atmosphere capable of competing with us in any industrial time, if indeed the hand of the marvelous industrial transformation of the last half century can ever be overcome.

"It would be more worthy of the old New England spirit if we should study carefully how Massachusetts and supply them with their needs. This was the purpose of the Massachusetts League of Education and Good Will."

JOHN L.'S BELT OF GOLD IS 'JUNKED'

A crumpled ball and huddled with a yellow substance today; back thirty-eight years and more the curtain of the old Boston Theatre, and on the night of August 1, 1887, was being pulled down for the gold in it.

Forty-four years, almost to a day, from the memorable occasion when the "Rocky Strong Boy" whisked the chin of Paddy Ryan, the Troy Hercules, and bristled against the heavyweight throne, the symbol of his prowess and the esteem in which his associates held him was going the way of all things glorious.

Once a millionaire, but always free with his money, he died leaving an estate of but a scant $2,000. All the rest—including the belt—was only a memory.

BRICKLAYERS GET $1.50 AN HOUR; JOBS GONE

Pawtucket, R. I., April 1 (A.P.).—Contractors today announced an increase in pay for bricklayers from $1.35 to $1.50 per hour. This action was met with a strike. It was said, on construction of a new $1,500,000 high school. In granting the increase the contractors cut the force of bricklayers from 45 to 22 men.

HUB CHAMBER FOR U. S. JUDGE PAY BOOST

That Federal court judges should be given increases in salaries as proposed in a bill now before Congress, was favorably voted by the board of directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. It was announced today.

In supporting the bill, the Chamber is in accord with the report of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which states the "low salaries constitute a menace to the administration of justice."

HUGE ARMY TO ATTACK PEKING

Tientsin, China, April 1 (A.P.)—Travelers arriving by motor from Peking say the road is filled with Mukden troops advancing on Peking, with columns marching on either side.

Japanese trains are leaving Peking daily for Hankow and Kalgan (headquarters of the Kuomintang, or National army), carrying Kuomintang troops and equipment.

Mukden forces are believed to be moving across country toward Nan-how in an attempt to cut off the Kuomintang troops remaining in the capital.

Peking dispatches to the London Daily Mail said a severe battle was raging for the possession of Peking, with the booming of guns plainly audible in the capital. The Kuomintang troops are commanded by Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang. They are believed to be Peking recently after being defeated in the vicinity of Tientsin.

Countess Sues

Count Ludwig Salm-Hogarten today confirmed that his mother, Countess Adolfin, was suing his wife, the former Millicent Rogers, for the return of a number of jewels which the dowager countess alleges she lent her.

THUG SHOOTS IN $120 HOLDUP

Worcester, April 1.—Firing a shot through the floor to grove his meat business, a thug held up the manager and assistant manager of the Community grocery store in Highland street and got away with $120.

Warren Hodgkins, the manager, said he thought the holdup man was joking until the shot was fired. Bert Trainor, a clerk, was ordered into a back room while Hodgkins was forced to hand over the contents of the cash register.

While the holdup was in progress two confederates of the armed thug watched outside to prevent anybody entering. They were seen by a woman who did not realize until she heard of the robbery why they were sitting in front of the store.

In Grim Race

Lloyd Hahn, B. A. A. runner, who is racing from Honolulu to Falls City, Nebraska, to see his mother before she dies.

TRACK STAR IS RACING DEATH

San Francisco, April 1.—Lloyd Hahn, track Boston Athletic Association mile runner, and hero of a hundred breath-taking finishes on the cinder paths of the world, is today a heartbroken competitor in a grim race in which his fleet legs can help him no more.

The great runner is racing against death, a race 5,000 times as long as the B. A. A. man's favorite distance.

Hahn's mother is dying at her home in Falls City, Nebraska, and Hahn is on his way from Honolulu trying to reach her bedside before death arrives.

Hahn's home is in Nebraska, but his business brought him to Boston in 1923 and he enrolled in the ranks of the Boston Athletic Association, since that time he has been connected with the Ford company's Boston branch, and has won many honors for the club.

Hahn has been touring Australia and Hawaii with Jackson Scholtz, a national champion sprinter.

He received word that his mother was dangerously ill, and immediately cancelled his scheduled race and took the first boat for San Francisco.

TARIFF BOARD HEAD, MARVIN, ACCUSED

Blamed by Dennis for Blocking Reduction of Woolen Textile Rates

Washington, April 1 (A.P.)—Chairman Marvin of the Tariff Commission was blamed today by one of his Democratic colleagues, Commissioner Dennis, for the commission's failure to consider any reduction in woolen textile tariff rates.

Mr. Dennis informed the Senate tariff investigators that the commission had been told these rates were so high as to constitute an embargo, but that action was blocked by Mr. Marvin, who appeared before the House ways and means committee before he was appointed to the commission in an effort to get higher duties on woolens.

CITES POTTERY PROBE. "He makes his opposition on the grounds that the subject is too complex," said Dennis. "It is that is why the chairman conducting an investigation headed toward him, which is just as complicated? We are up to our necks in the pottery investigation now."

Dennis declared the commissioner had pigeonholed the vegetable oil case.

TRYING TO LINK MORGAN AND RADIO TRUST

Trade Board Probes Big Companies Trailing 2-Billion-
Dollar Monopoly

New York, April 1 (A.P.)—What was interpreted as an effort to show a possible connection of the house of J. P. Morgan & Co. with an alleged radio monopoly, was blocked today by the Federal Trade Commission.

The attempt was made to learn the identity of the stockholders of the General Electric Company during the examination of William H. French of Schenectady, N. Y., by Edward L. Smith, counsel for the commission.

Smith asserted that the identity of stockholders in the company would show a condition of interlocking stockholders in companies with assets aggregating $2,000,000,000.

He indicated he would try to disclose the identity of the dominant stockholders in the International Telephone & Telegraph Company and the General Electric Company, together with the governing stock personnel of the other respondents in the so-called Radio Trust investigation, including the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, the Western Electric Company, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, the Radio Corporation of America, the Wireless Specialty Apparatus Company and the United Fruit Company.

'Jumping Jacks,' Student Calls U. S. Jazzers

Washington, April 1 (A.P.)—Jazz will turn America's future generations into "a bunch of jumping jacks" unless it is curbed soon, in the opinion of Don Alfonso Zelaya, son of a former president of Nicaragua and student of musical vibrations.

America, he has concluded, already is vibrating at an alarming rate because of the Charleston, jazz orchestra, and such influences which have upset the proper cosmic rhythm of things.

"Heaven, it is awful—this undurable jazz, jazz, jazz!" he exclaimed. "Everywhere you go, you hear it. Good music produces spiritual vibrations, but bad music, like jazz, sets up the wrong kind."

$50,000 FIRE IN OLD ORCHARD

Old Orchard, April 1.—Fire today destroyed four cottages and damaged a nursing home in Kittery avenue, with a loss estimated at $50,000, and threatened to spread to the ocean pier and White Way.

The flames were fanned by a strong wind, but a blanket of wet snow on the houses and buildings aided firemen in stopping the spread of the fire. A general alarm was sounded and the fire was under control in about an hour.

The cottages were all owned by George H. Lefebvre, president of other cottages removed household effects to points of safety.

"I've been using Rinso" for several years now and I must say it's splendid when it comes to washing clothes snow-white and saving hard work. To look at my clothes one might think I had spent hours rubbing them. But I haven't—thanks to Rinso. Just soaking in Rinso suits overnight and then rinsing in the morning is enough to make even the most soiled pieces spotless. And it's great to be able to face washday without danger of rough and reddened hands. Washday holds no worries for me.

MISS MARY CONNELL
39 Park Street
Malden, Mass.

Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

Read this delighted Malden woman's letter:

New quick way soaks clothes whiter —whiter than you could rub them

YOU don't know how sweet and clean clothes can get until you've tried this new way. Everything white, bright and spotless—without a bit of hard rubbing.

Give up that washboard for good. Give up bar soaps, powders, chips. From now on your washday will be easy.

Get Rinso from your grocer. This granulated soap is all you need on washday.

The safe laundry soap

See what thick, creamy suds it gives, how soft and nice it makes the water.

Soak the whole week's wash in these cleaning suds—and watch the dirt float off. No scrubbing. No hard rubbing at all. Clothes soak whiter and brighter than you could rub them!

Rinso is easy on the hands and absolutely safe for your finest cottons and linens. Contains no acids, bleaches or harmful chemicals.

Rinso whitens better than boiling. A rub or two between the fingers makes even the most soiled parts snowy. Stretches, too!

Watch dirt float off

No more rubbing your strength away on washday! Rinso loosens dirt—gently. You can see it float off in the rinsing.

Saves clothes from being scrubbed and boiled threadbare. Saves hands from getting washworn and swollen.

Millions now do the weekly wash this easy way. You can, too. Just say "Rinso" to your grocer—and follow simple directions on package.

In washers, too!

Rinso is so fine in washers that 23 leading manufacturers recommend it. Quick and safe—and gets white clothes whiter, colored clothes brighter, then ever.

CHAPMAN SAYS HE IS 'GOAT'

has been tackled on my shoulders, as no doubt based on the New York mail robbery and my escape from the government prison, and it has been alleged that I engineered the escape and that I "framed up" the mail robbery.

I had absolutely nothing to do with engineering either the mail robbery or the Atlanta break. I was in the prison hospital when the escape was planned by others, and I had no intention that other prisoners were planning an escape until a few days before I got over the wall.

PICTURES EVERYWHERE

When I got out of the hospital in Atlanta, most every policeman and detective in the United States was on my trail. My picture was circulated all over the country, in big cities and little hamlets, and in cross-road country stores. Wherever I went I saw my picture and circulars offering a reward for my capture.

Within a month after my escape I was the most thoroughly escaped criminal in the history of the world.

If a bank was held up, they said Gerald Chapman did it. If a train was held up, they said Gerald Chapman did it. If a murder was committed, they said Gerald Chapman did it.

A bank might be held up in Los Angeles on a Monday and a police officer killed in Birmingham, Ala., on a Tuesday, indicating that I could not possibly have got from Los Angeles to Birmingham in one day's time, but it never occurred to anybody that it was physically impossible for me to have staged all the crimes with which I was charged.

HAD RIGHT GUESS

Sometime in the latter part of 1924, while I was in the West, I read an account in a Chicago paper of a mail train hold-up on the Long Island. A lone robber jumped into the mail car and stuck a gun under the nose of the mail clerk and got away with the contents of the car.

"Well," I said to a friend, "I'll bet a million that they got that Long Island hold-up on me."

The following day the Chicago papers announced that Gerald Chapman was the lone robber who stuck up the train. Furthermore, the mail clerk positively identified my photograph.

"That's the man that held me up," he said. "I'm sure that the man."

Of course I was not the man. I was a thousand miles away when the robbery occurred. Now just consider what would have happened to me if I had been arrested for that crime. The mail clerk's identification was positive. I would have been convicted and put in the penitentiary.

About ten days after the job was staged a young man was arrested on suspicion of having knowledge of the crime. It was rumored that the young man was a confederate of mine. Subsequently he admitted that he was "the lone robber" and led the officers to a garage where he had hidden the money.

Still later on, after my escape from the hospital in Atlanta, I was accused of another crime with which I had no connection. Please remember that I'm not certain about the dates on these crimes. I'm only surviving at the date. This crime was a hold-up and murder. Another "lone robber" entered a bank in Chambersburg, Pa., and got away with several thousand dollars. Within ten minutes after the robbery had left the bank the alarm was given. The state police and county officers were on his trail.

STATE TROOPER KILLED
About ten miles out of Chambersburg the robber stopped at a gas filling station for gasoline. The officers arrived at the station soon after the robber had left. As I understood it, there were several cars waiting for the robber to return. One of the state troopers came on the road that he had taken. There was a gun fight. The state trooper was killed. The murderer was identified by his photograph as the driver of the hand truck.

There was absolutely no doubt in the mind that Gerald Chapman was the murderer of the state trooper and on the strength of his identification the newspapers of the United States circulated the news that I had killed another man, and so the officials of Pennsylvania were about to put me in the penitentiary.

Now I am informed that the man who did the killing has been captured, and that he has acknowledged his guilt.

Then there was the robbery of the American Express Company in Philadelphia, O., during which an officer was shot. I was accused of that job, but I was many hundred miles away when it occurred. I didn't even know the fellow who staged it.

Then there was the murder on Ben Huron, the witness who testified against me at my trial in Hartford. Roughly immediately after I was released from prison, he was killed because he had given damaging evidence against me.

Anderson, in the newspapers says, was college bred, a scholar and a linguist. Anderson would have regarded what the killing of then name would have had a considerable effect on my appeal for a new trial. And if the Indiana authorities had caught Anderson, I there any doubt in your mind that he would have been sentenced to death? I am informed that the real murderer has confessed that he killed Ben Huron.

Between my escape from the Atlanta prison and my arrest in Maryland I was accused of nine spectacular holdups and three murders.

The fourth and fifth of my trials is that of Policeman James Skelly of the New Britain police department. I will discuss this one in my next installment. I had no prior connection with the murder, but I had with the other three.

DISARMAMENT IS DECEIVED BY BRITAIN

General Action Impossible
While Suspicion Exists, Commons Told

London, April 1 (AP)—The House of Commons today rejected a motion for a general action against the British government, which is accused of having deceived the world by its policy of disarmament. The motion was introduced by Mr. MacDonald, leader of the Labour party, and was supported by a large number of members. The government, however, defended its policy and stated that it was necessary to maintain the balance of power in Europe. The debate continued until late in the evening, with no decision being reached.

APPRAISAL EXPENSE REVEALED

Annual Report Also Shows That the Legal Costs Jumped to $192,276

The cost of the appraisal of property in five New England States, which the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company made to back up its request for increased rates, was revealed today as $1,392,577.

This amount was spent to ascertain the present replacement cost of all the property, according to the annual report of the company filed with the Federal Reserve Board at the State House. The cost will be charged off against income at the rate of $22,000 a month for five years.

Law department expenses for the past year, in which the company hired high-priced counsel to help with its successful battle in Massachusetts for a huge advance in rates, was disclosed as $192,276. Normally the cost is under $75,000.

The burden that Massachusetts telephone users are bearing is also disclosed by the report which shows a decrease for the entire country to $3,821,220, while net earnings in Massachusetts amounted to $6,600,874. The increase in rates was in this State only.

DETROIT'S FLIERS OFF FOR POLE

Leave Fairbanks for Point Barrow as First Mile Log in Race

New York, April 1 (A.P.)—Conquest of the great Arctic wastes is the lure that already has started one expedition on its first lap toward the North Pole and is spurring at least half a dozen other expeditions to completion of their plans.

Captain George Hubert Murray and Lieutenant Carl H. Brown of the Detroit Polar Expedition, left for Point Barrow, Alaska, yesterday for the first leg of their arctic expedition of the North.

The plane carried 3,000 pounds of supplies for use on future exploring trips in an effort to find and map the Arctic region.

The airplane, christened the "Alas Rex," and commanded by Murray, will leave for Point Barrow in a few hours. At Point Barrow, the population, mostly Eskimos, has kept busy in the effort to make the trip.

Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, who starts North Monday aboard the Centurion, has been busy gathering data on the snow has made of the Arctic from Canadian files. Extra mail bags and supplies have been bought for the Byrd expedition which will make the trip.

The plan will be to land in the hold of the Centurion after being damaged by heavy seas as were the planes used by James MacMillan last year.

A new expedition to the pole was in progress today when it was learned that the French government is investigating the possibility of using American group "contingent" tractors on an expedition.

QUEEN'S NIGHTS

APRIL FOOLISHNESS

Nothing really is so sad as a "fun" that hurts. Yet I know country men north that have not in their day, it is called of "fools," whether it be April or not.

It is good to have a day for the young, for those who like to laugh and tease, for children to play harmless tricks and the silly ones to test their talents. Perhaps it is not going too far if a few old fellows are paid off—tired by some satisfaction in this.

But for that point it is not fun, and only cruel nature's find of pleasure in it. I suppose it springs from a desire for power. Perhaps we cannot please people—just what we can always find a way to make them suffer. I hate the idea.

Yet in my childhood I was as any other at a job or a little wickedness that pleased a bunch. I remember once that someone had sent me in a letter of a certain kind of a letter and I had written a letter to a certain kind of a letter.

But I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter. I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter. I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter.

But I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter. I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter. I have never seen a letter of a certain kind of a letter.

"I bought a car today," Ranny announced to Sylvia.

READ THIS FIRST

SYLVIA STAR, employed in the Boston Public Library, has been engaged to RALPH PHELPS, Boston real estate man, for a year when he has her for free him because he is fallen in love with her friend, FAY SHIRLEY, a Beacon Hill first heart-broken. Sylvia gives him up, to the great satisfaction of her Aunt Agnes ("AUNT AGONY"), the old maid who teased her. Aunt Agony calls Ranny a good-for-nothing and predicts that he'll never be true to any woman.

Her opinion of him seems to be correct, too, when he and Fay decide not to marry, and he elopes with Sylvia and marries her after all. For shortly after the pair settle down in their tiny Beacon street flat, he begins to stay out nights to play poker with his old cronies, and has a second furlough with Fay Shirley.

This, however, ends abruptly when Sylvia breaks the news that she's going to have a baby. Fay announces her engagement to one of her old boys, EDDIE CARTER, a State street wholesale merchant, and marries him. But shortly after the birth of the baby boy, Ranny is back at his old tricks, and spends so much money that Sylvia has to give mudo lessons to meet the household expenses. Then she discovers that Ranny is running around with young PUSSE MARCH, a friend of Ranny's sister, LOLLY. Lolly has married her father's chauffeur, THOMAS BOYLE, and persuaded him to take Boyle into his real estate firm. MOTHER PHELPS sorrowfully tells Sylvia that Ranny's father is deeply disappointed in him as a business man, whereas Boyle has all kinds of ambition and pep.

Ranny becomes interested in a divorced woman who sells real estate for his father's firm—MRS. JANE BRACKETT. And after a night, when Sylvia gives a supper party for Mrs. Brackett, Fay warns her that Ranny is in love with the woman. Sylvia feels positive that Fay must have seen them together, and when she phones the office, she is told that Ranny is not there.

CHAPTER XXXII

SYLVIA probably was within a hair's breadth of taking home from Miss March again if it had not been for the thing that happened in the next morning. A tiny happening, it was true, but it changed her whole life for her.

As she was turning away from the telephone in the little hall of the apartment house, she heard a soft knock. She opened the door and found a young man standing there. He was a stranger to her, but she recognized him as the man who had been in the office with her father.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I've come to see you. I've been thinking about you a great deal lately, and I've decided to come and see you. I've been thinking about you a great deal lately, and I've decided to come and see you."

TROTSKY SAYS A. F. L. IS CAPITAL'S TOOL

Attacking the American Federation of Labor as the agency of American capitalism, Trotsky in today's installment of his famous Moscow speech declares that international labor is dominated by two poles. The revolutionary pole is located in Russia. The opposite pole of conservatism with the capitalists is situated in America.

By LEON TROTSKY,
Organizer of the Red Army.
The international labor movement of today reveals, with unprecedented clarity, two poles on which the future of the world hangs. The pole of the world over which the future hangs, the revolutionary, is located here. The other, the conservative, is in the United States of America. During the past few years the labor movement in America has evolved the most perfect forms and methods of reformism—a policy of compromise with the bourgeoisie.

We now have in the United States an extensive movement of the so-called "Company Unions"—organizations opposed to the regular trade unions, which unite in their ranks workers as well as employers, or to be more correct, representatives of both groups.

LABOR ARISTOCRATS
I believe it was Mr. Rockefeller who initiated this movement before the war. But it is only recently, in 1921, that it has spread to the great industrial centers in America.

With few exceptions, the American Federation of Labor, as the official organization of the labor aristocracy in the United States, has joined a movement, which means a fraud and complete acknowledgment of the identity of interest of labor and capital on the one hand, and a denial of the necessity for independent labor organization and action on the part of the proletariat, on the other.

Amidst this movement, there have sprung up in America numerous labor-saving banks and insurance associations whose representatives take of both labor and capital ruthlessly. Nowhere is the exploitation of the wages of American workers so evident as in the high cost of living is a gross exaggeration, although it is true to a certain extent of the upper strata of labor, who manage to save. Through these labor banks the savings flow back to capital, which reinvests the money in the same enterprise where the workers accumulate their savings. In this manner capital increases its earning resources, at the same time arousing an interest among the workers for the welfare of the industry.

LOSING MEMBERS

The American Federation of Labor found it necessary to introduce a scale of wages based on the complete solidarity of the interests of labor and capital. Wages must vary with the entire system more productive. Thanks to the mechanization of industry and the better organization of the methods of work, the American laborer produces two and one-half times as much as the German. The American agricultural laborer produces twice as much as the European farmer.

The ancient Albatross were said to be few people, because each of them had on the average four wives. In the United States there are many people, because each of them has a mechanical horse-power into human power you will find that every woman of the United States is leading a life of command (the mechanical wife). This does not, of course, eliminate the fact that American economic power depends upon human efforts, that is, hard work.

Quick, ample lather in cold water—in hard water too!

IT HAS CAPTIVATED THOSE STERNEST OF CRITICS—THE MEN

They expect so much of a soap! Lather—quick, ample, enough for a whole neighborhood. Profuse even in hard water! A not too noticeable fragrance. An after-feeling that leaves you expansive, well-groomed, stimulated. A cake that won't crumble after a few usings, that stays firm to the touch till the last sliver. Men certainly like Lux Toilet Form—they ask their wives to buy it—they buy it themselves! It gives them everything they want in a soap.

We made Lux Toilet Form by the very same method the French use for their coiffure, finest soap. Yet—blissed achievement—you pay no more for it than you used to pay for common, uninspired soap! No wonder everyone eagerly demands this "savon de toilette."

Lux Toilet Form is on sale wherever toilet soap is sold. See Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THIS is April Fool's, but due to some oversight, it is not a national holiday.

IT'S the time of the year when thousands of men and women play practical jokes on each other and get married.

IF their wedding isn't a success they can blame it on the calendar.

LOSERS of women get married in April so that their alliances can begin by June.

THEY like to know where their vacation money is coming from.

THESE courts are as busy nowadays that it takes five or six weeks before a wife starts settling her separate maintenance.

ONE woman said she got married last April for a joke. She hasn't seen her joke since.

SHE says the next time she has a wedding she's going to handout the bridegroom to the altar.

THE thought when a wife has to leave her husband before she even has a chance to get him out of the house.

NO man should stay single if he can get the right kind of a girl. Let some women are so lazy they wouldn't even keep house for a six day bicycle race.

THEIR idea of happiness is to be married to a cross-country rider.

AND the further he runs, the happier they are.

JUNE is really the month for brides, but some girls like to have a rehearsal in April.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE WINDOW OPPOSITE

By Mary Henke

THE court was so narrow that she could see her neighbor's face as she passed. She was never meant to be an actress; but at least she was a good actress. There is always something to be thankful for.

Sometimes she came home so tired she could hardly stand on her small feet. She had to scheme and economize to live on her salary and make her own clothes from bargain remnants. But she never wanted time feeling sorry for herself. One day she went out and had good times, some of them went on "parties" as they called it and always, presents their "reasons" had given them.

Tried to Get Elsa

They tried to get Elsa to go with them. A little drink and just and loving didn't do anybody any harm, they told her. Perhaps she might have gone, somewhere where she was lonelier than usual, if it hadn't been for the boy sitting there at the table alone. She couldn't bear to go off and leave a good time, leaving him lonely. So she smiled and declined when they offered to get "her dates," and they called her a "tiny little chick" and finally let her alone.

One Saturday noon she came home from work and the boy was not at his window. She looked for him a dozen times in an hour, but there was no sign of him. She reassured herself. Of course, he had to go out sometime. But she couldn't help thinking that something was wrong. Every evening when there was still no sign of him, she was in a fever of alarm. She sewed until her eye hurt and put in so many irregular stitches that she had to throw them all out the next day. And at last she gave it up and went to bed, but she could not sleep. Perhaps he had gone—gone off and left her. If he had, the world would never be the same again. She didn't know what his name was or the color of his eyes—but they were unimportant things. She loved him.

Sunday morning there was still no sign. The milk bottle on the sill had not been emptied. She watched until noon and then she could stand it no longer. She went out on her hat and went downstairs and over to the other court. She went up the dark, dirty stairs and found no one to ask. No one stood still and closed her eyes. "Something will tell me which is the door," and she opened her eyes and walked over and opened it. The first thing she saw was the table littered with papers, and then she turned and saw the tumbled bed and the boy in it. He was fast asleep up when he heard the door open, and his big dark eyes were hot and staring in his flushed face. "New York's come," he whispered, and lay down and closed his eyes.

On His Head

She went up and put her cool hand on his head and was startled to find how hot it was. She turned his pillows and straightened the tumbled bedclothes, and she gave him a drink of water and patting his forehead with her hand.

"I'll be back," she whispered, "I'm going to get a doctor."

She found a doctor down the street and brought him back with her. "Mental strain," he said bravely, "and I should say under nourishment. He needs rest and decent food." He glanced at the table. "Writer, I suppose. Probably never takes any exercise. He'd better get out of here as soon as he's able. This place would kill a man. I'll send a nurse."

Elsa went down and drew her little bundle from the bank. She had put it there, with confidence, "In case anything happened." She was almost penniless but she wouldn't let herself think of that. The boy must have care.

The nurse was a kind, motherly woman who assumed good-naturedly that they were anarchists. When Elsa stopped to see how the patient was getting along, the nurse let her give him the medicine. He always took it better from her. And sometimes she sat with him while the nurse went out for drugs. They didn't talk much but when their eyes met, they smiled.

Going Away

And at last the nurse said that he wasn't needing any longer. As soon

FOXY GRANDPA AND HIS INTERESTING DAILY BEDTIME STORY

BOBBY looked up at the fire which was slapping in South Africa at a beautiful head which was mounted on a thick plaque and said:

"Look, Foxy Grandpa. I never saw big horns like that on an animal. They're twisted like sticks of candy that hang on a Christmas tree. I wonder what it is!"

"That's an eland," I replied, "and it is a sad but true fact that all those roaming these plains they are fast disappearing. Just like our buffaloes at home."

"Why is that, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby.

"On account of their valuable hides," I replied.

"That's the trouble with having a one coat," muttered Bobby, stroking his own with his right paw.

"I certainly hope we'll see one of those elands," said Bobby very earnestly.

"Wouldn't be surprised," said Bobby, turning his head to one side and cocking his left ear as he gazed up at the head of the eland.

"It was only a few days after that that we were out on the plains and as we came to a wooden patch, a little bird darted over our heads and disappeared into the thicket. Bobby gave a low whistle and while perched.

"Rhinoeros bird,"

At this Bobby nearly had a fit and shouted:

"Then we are going to see a rhinoeros."

Bunny, turned Bobby, held up his paw to warn him to keep quiet and whispered:

"I don't think we'll see a rhinoeros, but we'll see something else."

Bobby looked at me as if to say, "Bunny's crazy. A rhinoeros bird certainly means a rhinoeros is near."

There we stood as still as the bushes near us in the still, still, because the leaves on the bushes trembled in the wind. Then it happened.

Right out of the thicket something came crashing. I thought at first that Bobby was right and it was a rhinoeros, but it wasn't. There right before our very eyes passed sixteen great big elands. They galloped off across the plain and soon they were nothing left but a cloud of dust.

They were great big fellows. If they were an inch tall they were six feet at the shoulder and Bobby said they often weighed over fifteen hundred pounds, and that it was a good thing that we hadn't stepped on them because all he would have been good for after that would have been a fur hat.

"Do you know," said Bobby "we've been trampin' around this country for days and I haven't seen one stream or spring. I wonder where those elands get water to drink?"

"They really don't need water," said Bobby. "Of course, they'll drink it if they find it, but if there isn't any they just go on their way with water that we've found growing here and they quench their thirst."

An American Issue

Here Is One for the Democratic Party

The Republican leaders in Washington have gone on record against any legislation for an all-American ship canal at this session of Congress. Whether the Republicans have done this in the interest of a British-Canadian ship canal remains to be seen.

The influence against Governor Smith's all-American canal policy are many and powerful.

What they have been able to accomplish in favor of a foreign canal project and against their country's own enterprise, the future alone can show.

But one fact is plain and sure. The ruling party in Washington, which has no end of time and attention for many foreign affairs just now, has little or no time for this all-American affair of vast importance.

The affairs of the World Court may occupy months. The prospect of a disarmament conference may consume weeks. The waste of time and discussion may go on without limit, although in neither case can a single substantial benefit result for the American people.

Yet time presses and interest ceases when a great project for the welfare and safety of the American people is laid before the leaders of the Republican administration.

What is to be said of such an un-American policy? More important still—what is to be DONE?

The answer is on the face of the situation. If the Republican party is to be duly un-American on the ship canal project, the Democratic party will be confronted with the duty—yes and the opportunity—to become an American party again and to go before the people with a real American issue.

What made the Democratic party great when it was great? What laid the foundation on which that party has stood as a party through the generations? What gave that party the strength to endure through the crises of the sixties and the emergencies of the last fifty years?

That party's Americanism—that party's achievements for THIS REPUBLIC—that party's foresight in providing for the power and development of the UNITED STATES for the benefit of the PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES.

If the Democratic party had not reached out for the Louisiana territory, if the Democratic party had not carried the flag to the Great Southwest, if the Democratic party had not spread the dominion of this government to the Western Coast, if the Democratic party had not built thus imperishable monuments to its patriotism and achievement from the banks of the Mississippi to the shores of the Pacific, there would have been no Democratic party at the end of the century, there would be no Democratic party today.

Not in interference with the affairs of foreign nations, not in subservience to foreign projects, but in devotion to the great affairs of the AMERICAN PEOPLE, in subservience solely to the projects for AMERICAN WELFARE, has the Democratic party found all that ever has made it strong and successful in the history of the republic.

In its departure from such policies and traditions, the Democratic party has met only discouragement and defeat. Once impregnated with the international ideas of Mr. Wilson, misled by his dreams of a world mission, tied to his guidance in a labyrinth of un-American schemes and ambitions, the Democratic party ignored the principles that had made it a power and forced the policies to which it owed its life. The experiment in foreign affairs has been made and it has failed. No public man in his sober senses can deny the failure.

Therefore, the time is here for the Democratic party to begin doing again what it did when it was a great party and, as a first evidence of good faith with the American people, to take up the enterprise of an all-American ship canal—take it up where the Republican party has dropped it, thus proving to the American people that the spirit of Jefferson, Jackson, Polk and Cleveland still lives and moves in this republic.

Elect Mr. Crocker

The United States Chamber of Commerce Needs His Leadership

Members of the United States Chamber of Commerce throughout the New England States, which constitute the first election district of that organization, may well be gratified by the nomination as Regional Director from this district of Walton L. Crocker, President of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company.

He has allowed the use of his name at the request of a large number of influential members of the organization, who believe that his wide business experience, his intimate knowledge of the New England region, the extent of his acquaintanceship, and the genuineness of his National vision, qualify him for the sort of leadership that is needed today on the Directorate of the National organization.

Because of his prominence in the life insurance world, it is altogether appropriate that he should have the distinction of being the first life insurance man to be nominated as a Regional Director.

Support of his candidacy, however, is not limited to life insurance men. He was nominated by petitions signed by the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce of 15 Massachusetts cities and towns, including Boston, Fitchburg, Worcester and New Bedford, and by the Chambers of Commerce of some of the principal cities and towns in the other New England States, notably Hartford, Portland, Providence and Rutland.

In addition to his prominence in the life insurance world, as President of the largest company in New England, and in the banking world, as Director of the First National Bank of Boston, the largest bank in New England, Mr. Crocker's candidacy commands him to those interested in the educational and philanthropic life of the region.

Election of Mr. Crocker to the important position for which he has been nominated will benefit not only the region which he will directly represent, but also the other six election districts, from which the Regional Directors of the National organization are taken.

Election of Mr. Crocker will elevate to the directorate of the United States Chamber of Commerce a man who is too closely in touch with the life of the Nation to be handicapped by the prejudices of Sectionalism.

His pride in New England is animated by a desire to see this neighborhood of States make their contribution toward the American advance worthy the opportunities of the region.

A vote for his election is a vote to encourage New England to catch step with the Nation.

"He Shall Not Pass!"

WAYNE B. WHEELER, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, and admitted field marshal of the ultra-dry forces, calls Senator Edge's proposal for an advisory national referendum on prohibition "unauthorized, impractical, unprecedented and meaningless."

It is as yet unauthorized; it is not impractical, but entirely feasible; it is no more unprecedented than the condition which calls it forth; and as to its being meaningless, that would wholly depend upon whether the American people have a right to express their will and have that will respected by their servants in office.

Not even so adroit and effective a political strategist as Mr. Wheeler can prevent the majority in this country from registering its convictions when it decides that it is time to do so.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

CAN you stand success? Of course, you think you could stand success. We all think we could stand it.

"What's there hard to stand about success?" we cry. "It's failure that's hard to stand—not good luck. It's failure that makes you cranky and jealous and suspicious and selfish. And I wouldn't touch or get stuck on myself—not me. Some fellows might. Fact is, I guess most people I know can't stand success. They get so doggone conceited that no one could live with them. But me—I'm different."

In short, the very contemplation of success at any time leads to breed success. And success is pleasant to most of us.

We can stand failure because failure, unless it is too devastating, keeps us busy and interested in something besides ourselves.

Also, it gives us the proper perspective on our own lives by making us depend on the other fellow.

And some very wonderful things come out of the struggle with failure. Humor, for instance. It's the chase with their overcoats in book who are the world's prize humorists, and as this may seem.

Generosity—it's the broken woman.

an who is down the last crust of food which usually share that crust, and all her sympathy with you.

Courage—There's the one shining, glorious thing that is within the reach of the failure—the one thing whereon he may feast and warm his soul—his own heroism. True courage is common among the failures of the world. It declines and wanes with the coming of success.

But why should this be so? Why should poverty of the body and humiliation of the mind breed in spirit only active and healthy? Because, I think, they keep us near to that mysterious current of strength which flows from some invisible source through man to man. What is this mysterious current? Where is its source? I do not know. Some men call it God. I only know it exists. I know that it's a ladder to reach it when you're hungry than when you're fed.

I know you're more a part of the Big Plan when you're hungry and needy than when you're proud and rich. I know other people do finer things for you and you see nobler things in them when you're a failure than when you're a success.

Success never always shows you out from that.

It shows you out because you can't yourself see. You no longer want to be remembered how dependent you've been on other folk.

FALLACIES ABOUT ELECTRICAL POWER

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IN a pamphlet recently received there is mention made of a North Dakota farmer who asked an electrical engineer: "When will Niagara Falls reach here?" His question illustrated the misconception regarding the electrical business.

The pamphlet proceeds to state: Niagara Falls furnished only about 4½ per cent. of the nation's electrical energy. When Muscle Shoals is completed and running at full capacity it will generate less electrical energy than one single plant in Chicago generates now.

If all the streams were harnessed it would not make so very much difference. For seventy-two per cent. of the country's waterpower is west of the Mississippi, while seventy-nine per cent. of the demand for electricity is east.

Electricity can only be generated economically when it is near a plentiful supply of water. For every ton of coal burned in a light and power plant four hundred to six hundred tons of water must be used. Most coal mines are not near water.

The longest distance which electricity can be sent economically over wires at present and compete with local power is 250 miles.

The cost of generating electricity is only about twenty per cent. of the total bill. The other eighty per cent. is the cost of delivering the service to the customer.

We are apt to let our imaginations run away with us when we get to talking about electricity and its practical use. It is well, therefore, to keep these facts in mind when we are engaged in the electrical business or investing in an electrical concern.

By careful management the cost of electricity remains about the same now as it did in 1914, while the cost of living has increased tremendously.

Here Is a Strange Bird

Evolutionists Think They Explain It.

These two Dyaks, natives of Borneo, are holding up a cassowary, giant bird that they have just killed.

Strange are the creatures that inhabit this earth and that originally, according to Bible teachings, inhabited the Garden of Eden with Adam and Eve.

It must have been intensely interesting to Adam and Eve, after they had both been created, after Adam came out of his sleep and found Eve and his rib stopped paining him, to walk around the Garden and see the animals.

This cassowary bird that lives in Borneo, Australia, and a few other places, must have interested them especially. You see how big a bird it is, how powerful the heavy feet with which it runs swiftly and kicks its enemies to death.

Standing at full height it is as tall as a man, the biggest bird now living, except the ostrich.

A much bigger bird, the roc, once lived on this earth, and undoubtedly delighted little Cain and Abel as they played together in the Garden, but it has vanished, with many other species that have died out.

Concerning this strange cassowary bird, the evolutionists who think that they know everything say evolution EXPLAINS it.

They say the hot climate in which it lives, the land on which it has had to run and fight, has developed those strong, powerful feet.

They call your attention to the curious wings which have five big quills, but no feathers on them, and say that this bird, like others, once had regular wings and regular feathers and flew.

But it became so big and strong that it didn't NEED to fly any longer, being able to take care of itself on the ground. So the wings gradually disappeared. They point to the fact that fish found in lakes underground where the light never penetrates are blind, their eyes having disappeared, because they no longer needed them.

Instead of regular feathers this bird has queer feathers like hair, and an enormous thick bony helmet it has on its head, with very big eyes to watch for its enemies.

The Dyak hunter on the left, probably would never have got this cassowary, if white men hadn't come along and given him a gun in place of his bow and arrow. The poor cassowary had only his legs and his feet to defend him against the gun, which was hardly fair.

You are privileged as an American citizen to think what you like about evolution, or about the earth's creation. The evolutionists think they can explain everything, but millions of the faithful prefer to accept the tale of creation as told in the Book of Genesis.

If you ask them how polar bears, cassowaries, lions, rhinoceroses, elephants, wolves, tigers, monkeys, owls and all the rest could have lived in the same climate in the Garden of Eden, you do not weaken their faith.

They will tell you it is quite probable that the Garden of Eden had VARIOUS climates. It might have been cold enough for polar bears on the north side, warm enough for cassowaries and lions on the south side.

This arrangement would have given Adam and Eve and the children, right in their own Garden, the benefit of different climates, Summer when they wanted it, Winter when they wanted it, with appropriate animals. That is how the rich have it now, going to Florida when they like, or to Canada—Winter and Summer in the same month.

Anyhow, this is an interesting bird. It is sad to realize as we must, that like a few graves inhabitants of the original Garden of Eden—of products of evolution—take your choice this noble bird must vanish before the white man's gun and the natives' hunger.

ARE YOU A SENSITIVE SOUL OR THE CALLOUS KIND?

Sometimes you wonder if you really love anyone but yourself? You read and hear of the truest self-sacrifice among members of families and you yourself if you have such a depth of feeling or yours.

On many occasions when a situation arose which made it necessary for you to favor yourself or members of your family, you have wanted to please yourself.

You wonder if you are capable of the depth of emotion which prompts others to suffer so that members of the family may escape such an experience?

You may be of a callous nature who feels neither joy nor sorrow very keenly. If so you are both fortunate and unfortunate.

You miss a lot of sweetness and you escape a lot of pain. You would cause you little inconvenience.

What might cause another intense physical and mental pain would cause you little inconvenience.

You are not so sensitive as those about you.

Think higher are not so sensitive to what hurts a thin skin.
